North America

The great horned owl does not have horns but gets its name from the feathers that stick up either side of its head. They use these tufts of feathers as a sort of camouflage to blend in with their surroundings.

Brown bears spend their autumn eating all day getting ready for a long hibernation during the winter. This helps them as they sleep during the winter months, living off their stored fat.

On average a porcupine can have more than 30,000 quills on their body. When another animal attacks the porcupine starts by giving a warning stamping their feet and hissing before using their quills to defend itself.

Cats are one of the most popular pets in the world. There is an estimated 600 million cats in the world right now! They love to sleep, spending 13 to 14 hours a day sleeping to conserve energy.

The mountain lion was once found all over the United States. Nowadays they are mostly seen in the western states of the United States. However, there is a subspecies of mountain lion that lives in Florida.

Animal profile :

Grey wolf

Height:

41–63 inches in length,
31–33 inches in shoulder height

Weight:

79 – 99 lbs

Diet:

Grey wolves are carnivores that eat the meat of large hoofed animals for their survival.

They primarily hunt animals such as elk, deer, moose and caribou.

Class: Mammalia

Order: Carnivora

Family: Canidae

Genus: Canid

Species: C. lupus

When a wolf howls, it can be heard from up to ten miles away. The howl is used as a way to warn of danger or to call to their pack. Each pack of wolves has a unique howl, and wolves howl more when the moon is full and bright.
